Category:IOS firmwareQ: How to combine two arrays from the same array in PHP? I have an array of arrays. I need to combine arrays that are the same. How can I do this? The code:

$combinedArrays = array(); $total1 = $total2 = 0;
    foreach($arrays as $array) { $total1 +=
$array['total']; $total2 += $array['total']; } I just need $combinedArrays to be the $total1 and $total2 after all arrays have been checked. A: By default, array_combine merges the arrays together Example:
$a = array('a' => 1, 'b' => 2, 'c' => 3); $b = array('a'

=> 4, 'd' => 5); array_combine($a, $b); echo $a['a'].
PHP_EOL; echo $a['b']. PHP_EOL; echo $a['c'].
PHP_EOL; echo $b['a']. PHP_EOL; echo $b['d'].
PHP_EOL;

Output 1 2 3 4 5 A: You want to use array_combine() Q: When are counters useful I have a task where I need to get the value of a counter for a period of time and later do some calculations using that value. What are the typical use cases where counters are useful? A: I am answering for MSDPCounters value. As mentioned in documentation by looking at audit setting of the counter, you can get the value of the counter for a specific process. You can get start
